COURSE DEVIATION GUIDELINES FOR UNDERGRADUATE AND GRADUATE COURSES

Course deviations are available for calendar deviations and three types of time deviations.

Calendar Deviations

A department may request a calendar deviation for days/dates outside the regular sessions in the academic calendar, e.g., courses that meet for 12 weeks during a 16 week semester. These requests must be approved by the Department Head, the Associate Dean of Instruction, and the Associate Vice President for Undergraduate Education (Attachment 1). Following approval, the Associate Vice President for Undergraduate Education will direct Classroom Scheduling personnel to schedule the course.

A calendar deviation must be submitted each semester a course is offered outside the normal calendar.

Time Deviations

A department may also request a deviation for classes that do not meet during the official class meeting times as approved by the Instruction Council on March 8, 2005 (Attachment 2). A deviation is required if the department wishes to schedule a class that:

1. does not start at the standard time;
2. meets longer than the standard 50 or 75 minute class time (courses that meet during the approved evening times do not need to submit a deviation request); or
3. does not meet the standard days of week format (e.g., meets Monday and Thursday).

Departments must provide a very strong rationale for deviating from the official class meeting times. Course times that deviate from the normal schedule create conflicts in student schedules and drastically limit the availability of general university classrooms.

Deviations from the standard start time are rarely granted, but requests for longer class meeting times may be approved if a departmental room is available or if the department schedules another course that meets in the same room on the opposite day (i.e., Monday and Wednesday or Friday, or Tuesday and Thursday).

The following are exceptions to the deviation requirement:

- Labs or discussion sections meeting in departmental rooms or labs may deviate from the regular course schedule, as long as they begin at an acceptable 'start' time.
- Tulsa courses that meet for 3 hours, one day a week may do so without a deviation provided they begin at a regulation start time.
